ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A device, a method and a system for direct execution of code from a flash memory arrangement, in which a separate memory component is not required, even if a flash memory component is used which has a restriction on the size of a data block which can be read at one time. Furthermore, the flash memory arrangement is optionally implemented as a "single die" chip or device, which is more efficient for manufacturing and which also results in lower costs.